

Week 4: English

April 27 – May 1

Hello Grade 7! Just a reminder if you did not submit your power point with voice recording, video or live presentation of your INS last week, that is your priority this week. If you did submit it you will receive an email with your marked rubrics Monday or Tuesday. Please note on the Oral Presentation and Media Presentation “eye contact” is no longer required and did not affect your mark. You’ll also notice I’m using a new format this week – borrowed from the Math Channel – to keep things similar for all of you. Have a great week!

Ketchup
(Catch Up)

Turn in the power point with voice recording or video of your INS Presentation or schedule a live presentation with Mrs. Barrett.

Mustard
(Must Do)

1. Read for 30 minutes each day.
2. Reflect on what you have read this past month and share your reflection by replying to Mrs. Barrett’s SRT Reflection.
3. Remember to include some information from your book and make a connection to the comment.
4. Respond to another student’s comment (use the @ and their name to link them). Be kind and authentic.

Pickle
(You Pick)

1. Visit this web page: CBC Best YA Books 2019
2. Browse through the CBC Best Canadian YA Books of 2019 and choose 1 or 2 you would consider reading.
3. Post the title of the book or books you would consider reading and provide your reason for choosing these in the CBC Best Canadian YA Books of 2019 post.

SRT Reflection:

I have been reading many professional articles about online teaching and learning and the technical aspects of the software we are using, most of these online. At the end of March break I started reading the 4th book in the Miss Peregrine’s Series: Map of Days. Although I enjoy this book I have been progressing very slowly because of my professional reading and because I am also reading a nonfiction book. On April 2, we welcomed a new puppy to our home. She is a miniature aussie-doodle, full of love and spunk. To help our family be good dog parents, I am re-reading The Art of Raising a Puppy by the Munks of New Skete; a book I read many years ago when I adopted my first dog with my husband. This book is full of information, practical tips and thoughtful reflection. It reminds us that Magnolia is a little puppy with no intention to be naughty and provides techniques to use to redirect her behaviour and create the habits we want when she is full grown. Unlike the fiction book, this one is a book that I have read completely, re-read some sections several times and shared specific sections with my family so that we can all be on the same page with her. Tell me about what you’ve been reading!

CBC Best Canadian YA Books of 2019